LABOR TERMS OF TREATY REVISED; READY MONDAY

Paris, June 14.—The Council of Five continued the work of editing the revised peace treaty this morning at the same time enabling Baron Bickel, the Japanese representative, to acquaint himself with the document. The work is nearly completed and it is believed the treaty will go to the revision committee late tonight. It is said that it will be printed and ready for delivery to the Germans Monday or Tuesday.

It is the present plan of the council to consider the Austrian terms Monday. Representatives of Turkey will be received Tuesday.

If no other developments arise, President Wilson probably will make his trip to Brussels between Wednesday and the expiration of the German time limit.

Labor Covenant Modified.

Some modifications were made by council yesterday in the labor covenant in the peace treaty.

The existing labor situation in various countries, coupled with clever German tactics, had resulted in this part of the treaty becoming one of the principal points of attack in the counter proposals.

The allied reply, it developed today, will lay stress upon the character of the permanent reparations commission. It will be explained that this commission is not a tyrannical body, but it will administer its duties in a spirit of fairness and helpfulness, so as to facilitate Germany's economic reconstruction.

Reports from Germany on the prospects of Germany's signing the treaty are lacking in charity. It is known that the council is acting on the belief that there is no general feeling on the part of the masses against German acceptance of the terms. An air of optimism prevails the council in this respect.

FIVE POLICEMEN QUIT JOBS

DEMAND RESIGNATION OF KENNEDY

Five police officers, dissatisfied with conditions under which they are asked to work, called on Harry O. Nowlan, president of the fire and police commission at 10:45 o'clock this morning and tendered their resignations, to take effect at 7 o'clock tonight, unless their demands were granted. The men are Lorenzo Cain, Ray Worthington, Jay Hymers, Milton Rogers and Ray Wooster.

"We are demanding the resignation of John E. Kennedy as a member of the fire and police commission; all shorter hours and better working conditions," Desk Sergeant Ray Worthington said. He announced that unless some agreement was reached before 7 o'clock tonight the officers would quit, leaving Janesville without an adequate police force.

"We have been slandered enough by Kennedy and until he resigns from the commission there can be no harmony in the police department," the officers declared.

The police told Mr. Nowlan that they would not stand for the threats and alleged slanderous remarks, they claim Kennedy has made in barrooms recently, in which they assert he has declared the police force was "rotten" and he would get the jobs of the members.

"Would you men be content if Mr. Kennedy was quitted?" Mr. Nowlan asked.

It was said that if Mr. Kennedy resigned as a member of the commission better working conditions put into effect and Chief Gower appointed as regular head of the department the men would stay.

"We told Mr. Nowlan that we were pleased with the work of Chief Gower and wanted him as our permanent head," Officer Worthington said.

All of the officers charged that since the appointment of Kennedy to the commission several months ago by Mayor Valentine, Kennedy has been in the habit of visiting saloons and other downtown places and belittling the work of the police department.

Milton Rogers, one of the departing officers said that he was approached by Mr. Kennedy today and asked for a reason for quitting. He said he resented Kennedy's attitude and practice of airing the differences of the department in saloons and behind the officers' back.

Mr. Rogers said that Mr. Kennedy told him that Chief Gower could never be found in his office and that Desk Sergeant Worthington was giving the orders.

"That is a lie. I know that Chief Gower is on the job every minute of the day and late at night," Mr. Rogers said.

"I have been at work every day since I took the chief's position," he said. "I have not been home for a night since I took the chief's position."

Chief Gower said, "This department can never run in a satisfactory manner until Mr. Kennedy and another member of the fire and police commission have been ousted."

Chief Gower said that he was made temporary chief three months ago and two days after he took office he was told by reliable persons that Kennedy had been slandering him in a downtown saloon. The chief announced that each day persons have come to him and complained of the actions of Kennedy.

Mayor is Silent.

"I have nothing to say regarding the situation as no report has been made to me," Mayor T. E. Welsh said this afternoon. When told of the demand for his resignation of Kennedy he said he had heard nothing of it.

Harry O. Nowlan, president of the commission, assured the men that the meeting of the commission would be held this afternoon in an effort to bring about a settlement of their differences. No meeting had been held up to 3 o'clock and at that hour the men announced they would turn in their resignations at 7 o'clock.

Janesville will be with little police protection if the officers quit tonight. Officer Charles Harmon will be the only available officer for night duty. The department has been short of officers for several weeks and Chief Gower states that it is impossible to engage men for the force.

UNION MEN NUMBERING 100,000 INVADE CAPITAL CITY.

WANT BEER AND WINE DRINKS

Gompers Heads Delegation From A. F. O. L. National Convention.

Washington, June 14.—Anti-Prohibition forces from many cities, composed largely of union men opposed to abolishing manufacture and sale of beer and light wines descended on Washington today for a great demonstration at the capitol, planned by the Central Labor Union of the District of Columbia.

Many special trains arrived during the morning and while awaiting the hour of the meeting—2 o'clock—the delegations with their banners marched about the city. As the influx continued, union officials in charge of arrangements predicted their first estimates of a crowd of 100,000 would be exceeded.

Discovery by the union reception committee that several automobiles placed at the disposal of visiting union officials had been placarded with signs reading, "I am a prohibitionist" resulted in complaints to the police.

DEMPSEY'S HEART IS WATCHED CAREFULLY

BY JOHNNY ECKHARDT

For the first time in history in this country, the stethoscope—an instrument used by physicians for sounding the heart beat—has come into daily use in the training work of a fighter. Jack Dempsey undergoes a stethoscope search every day, and some times the instrument is applied to the rosy chest of the challenger as many as three times in a day.

A daily course under the stethoscope is one of the innovations sprung by Trainer Jimmy DeForest, in charge of Dempsey's preparations for the "fight of his life" with Willard on Independence Day at Bayview Park. The trainer believes that better results can be obtained by keeping close tabs on the heart action of an athlete in training, than by any other means known to modern science, so in the past few days, several of the following: DeForest applies the heart instrument and keeps accurate tabs on the engine of Dempsey's burly physique.

The hardest task in the camp is to keep the Utah mauler from overworking. He has a tireless brand of energy and unless he is restrained, he is quite likely to take too many chances in his work. After several speedy rounds of boxing, Dempsey's heart is looked after so that its beat may be kept regular. The force and frequency of the heart beat is noted and when Trainer DeForest is in doubt, he loses no time in consulting one or two of the physicians who are usually to be found around the camp.

Manager Jack Kearns smiles when the stethoscope is brought into the camp, as he has seen it in business, he said, "but we are paying Jimmie to look after the details of the training, and we made up our minds immediately to abide by whatever Dr. DeForest added that Dr. DeForest is getting great results and that Dempsey is pleased."

War Hero's Plea Saves Mother From Jail Term

(BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS.)

Boston, June 14.—The appeal made by Mary Gallagher's war hero son saved her from a jail sentence when she appeared in the Superior Criminal Court charged with drunkenness.

As the defendant, a gray-haired mother of three sons in the service listened to the long record produced by the probation officer, she glanced at her soldier son, who was present in the court.

Assistant District Attorney Sheehan too, saw the mute understanding between the pair, and called the boy to the stand.

"When I returned from France recently I went home and found my mother was not there," he said. "I inquired and learned she was in jail. I was passed and wounded in France. I served there 18 months. I have hired a lawyer and I would like my mother home."

"Well, for the sake of your soldier boy and not for your sake I will give you a chance," said Judge Callahan. "If you have any heart you will appreciate what he did for you and stop drinking. I will file the complaints."

Steel and Iron.

Steel is a kind of iron which can easily be hammered out thin without cracking and can be made extremely hard by being heated and then cooled quickly. It is different from ordinary iron because of the amount of carbon in it. Wrought iron contains less carbon than steel and so it cannot be made so hard; cast iron contains more and so is brittle.

"Booze" Peddlers Laugh, Soldiers Get Cold Tea

(BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS.)

Topkapi, Kan., June 14.—Negroes whose house here was raided by the police after they had been arrested for peddling "booze" to the soldiers, have a good laugh on the police and the soldier boys from Funston. They sold the alleged "booze" to the boys at $4 a pint.

After the raid the police investigated the liquor taken, some 15 quarts, and found it to be tea and coffee. "The joke's on us and the soldier boys," said Chief Hannon. "We released the whole bunch. We can laugh about it, but how about the soldier who paid $4 a pint for cold tea or coffee?"

Sheafor Case Taken TO SUPREME COURT

The suit of Jean T. Sheafor, former Janesville high school principal, against the Standard Accident Insurance Co., of Detroit, which it was thought was finally settled last year, has been bobbed up in court circles again with the appealing of the case by the insurance company to the supreme court. All papers pertaining to the matter, together with the appeal were sent to Madison, yesterday.

The company is appealing from the decision rendered by Judge Grimm in circuit court October 21, last year granting Mr. Sheafor damages and costs to the amount of $4,400.22 against the risk company. The insurance people claim Mr. Sheafor failed to report his accident in due time and are seeking to escape liability on these grounds.

Action against the company was first taken February 4, 1916. A demurrer was later filed by the company. Judge Grimm ruled in favor of the plaintiff, and his decision was affirmed by the supreme court. The case was then brought to trial before Judge Grimm, who rendered the decision in favor of the plaintiff.

It is a relief to have one unmarried man about," said a pretty blonde stenographer. "And I hear that he is not even engaged. Not that it makes any difference, you know, but a young man is sort of nice to have about."

Beck Home Coming
is Well Attended

The home coming picnic at the Beck school, two miles north of Orfordville, Wednesday was a large gathering of over one hundred people.

A picnic dinner was served on the lawn of the school grounds, followed by a splendid program. Pupils of the school gave the first part of the exercises. O. D. Antikdel, county superintendent, presented the reading circle diplomas and the perfect attendance certificates. Roll call of the 58 teachers who have at some time taught in the Beck school was taken by John Beck, four of the teachers being present. Three of the former teachers gave five minute talks. They were Mrs. W. O. Howell, Merwin Beck and Miss Sadie M. Clapp.

W. E. Larson, state rural school inspector, was the chief speaker on the program.

Stanley Ashby, a former Beck school student, and lately returned from France, gave an interesting account of his experiences over there. Miss Grace Ashby, also a Beck school graduate, sang a solo accompanied by Miss Janet Tolleson on the piano.

The school victrola was used for the remainder of the program.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.
In this busy world of today we pay little attention to opportunities other than those presented for enriching ourselves in a financial way. We overlook the wealth of good things to be found in books. Mrs. Louise Ford writes on that subject as follows:

"Yes, do send me a book for my birthday. Not a bargain book, but a beautiful book, a book to caress; peculiar, distinctive, individual—a book that hath first caught your eye and then pleased your fancy, written by an author all right out of his heart. We will read it together in the gloaming, and when the gathering dusk doth blur the page, we'll sit with hearts too full for speech and think it over."

A book to caress! Who has not wished for a companion to enjoy in the reading of a book together, to laugh at the jokes, mayhap to shed a tear in the sad situations they were so real, and during the reading learn to love the characters almost as though they were real friends. For days after "finis" feel lonesome as though a dear friend had gone far away, perhaps never to return. The inspiration can at least be kept to spur us on to better things. The books that impels us to live nobly and do brave service for the good of others are the only ones to be read, while all others are a waste of time.

What visions of delight this little letter of Dorothy Wordsworth, written to Goldredge, brings to the real book lover. Not that one need be quite so particular in the book, but that it should fill a long felt want in both lives. Perhaps both have longed for the delight of travel. Others history or poetry, even Pollyanna might give enjoyment and at the same time prevent sending the poor little girl crutches when she was crying for a doll. It were better to learn from books than never to know the heart throbs of others.

In the beginning of New England such was the struggle for mere existence during the first years, that the descendants of the first settlers were almost strangers to books, depending almost entirely on the Bible and the almanac; imagine it if one can. They dearly loved Poor Richard's Almanac. Franklin, who was editor, made it his chief purpose to drive home its lessons to get the most out of their isolated lives; it was eagerly read by every member of the family. Never were books so welcome and read so often, and so carefully, as these poor almanacs.

Three books made up the library of Lincoln, of Edison and Carnegie. It is not the many books we read but the quality and thinking that makes for good influence.

"A man who has read ten pages with real accuracy," says John Ruskin, "is in some measure an educated person." Bacon says: "Some books are to be tasted, others to be swallowed, some few to be chewed and digested." Well, Bacon lived in a day when there was less haste and books could be "digested". Now there is such a grand rush for the latest war news and so little time for even that, there is no time for books.

When Charles Dickens first began writing the Pickwick papers, books were scarce and magazines nil. His first article was mailed at a station in London to a newspaper in great secrecy, going far from home lest he be discovered. Then the anxious waiting ere the paper came, and lo and behold, the unbelievable had happened, for there was Pickwick in black and white and each issue only increased the call for more. There were so many evils to be corrected that each book that followed was written with a purpose of arousing the people to think and make good. Books like Oliver Twist made the poor house no longer a home of horrors. Little Dorrit living in a prison with a father who was so unfortunate as to be in debt, Dickens must have been inspired to show the public the great injustice of shutting a whole family in prison with no possibility of ever earning enough to pay. How we have cried and laughed and stormed during the reading of Dickens' books with a congenial companion; what must it have been in the times of scarcity of books. These books set the world ahead a hundred years in its uplift for good; pity that the times are so rushed that they are very little read now, but they did their bit.

Charlotte Bronte in her unselfish service for her brother, all unknown to herself, learned the beautiful thought that slipped from her pen. After his death, when it was necessary to earn her living, friends urged her to write. Jane Eyre was the first, for which she received $38,000 and an invitation from Queen Victoria to visit Windsor Castle, for she greatly admired her genius. When Elbert Hubbard wrote, A Message to Garcia, he said, "One never knew when they might strike 13." It carried a much needed message to the world, for it was published in nine foreign languages and scattered broadcast. In our own land it was not a prophet without honor for it found its way to all the employed and became a reading lesson in the public schools. Oh! ye good books with the heart for service bound between the covers carrying a message for the uplift of struggling humanity. Blessed be good books.

Years ago the country was flooded with a low class of literature that came to be called "Yellow Literature." No one can estimate the harm it did to the growing youth. In the juvenile court it was found that boys were there from reading by story or picture that it was an easy and smart way to get along by stealing. Soon this kind of books was suppressed.

Seven million volumes were supplied to the soldiers during the war. Still there are many in France and Germany who are not getting enough. In camp and hospital men who had never read much before became eager readers. One of our canteen workers in Paris wrote me asking for reading, for the boys came for twenty miles and begged that she give them anything that was readable; she was so glad to have some for them as they were so pleased, and so disappointed if they did not receive any. She considered it was the greatest kindness to furnish them books, novels by standard authors, and poetry, also up-to-date technical works. Books were found to be uplifting and refreshing, helping to maintain the morale of the army, besides helping to pass with profit and amusement many homesick and weary hours.

What a debt the world owes to Andrew Carnegie for his gift of the many beautiful library buildings will never be rightly appreciated as this generation is rapidly passing and the curtain will soon be rung down. Why not keep his memory fresh by hanging in our own library a portrait of the donor, that his face like his name may be known to future generations? He has said that he would add a portrait to enhance the other gift if asked for. Let us ask.

So many remark that they do not have leisure to read books. If word should come that Shakespeare, Mrs. Southworth, Longfellow or others so well known by name were sitting by your fireside waiting to discuss their work for humanity—Uncle Tom's Cabin for instance, would there be no leisure? A home without well filled book shelves offers a desolate outlook, indeed, The authors become as friends and only to mention a name means to take their books with joy.

The first year of Federation of the Congregational and Presbyterian Churches in Janesville is completed and the membership of both churches vote Sunday on the permanent adoption of the plan. The Federated idea has been advocated and adopted in many communities and worked out very successfully as it has here. The identity of the individual organization is preserved and at the same time the strength of the church is increased materially. The experience has been interesting not only to those who have been affiliated with the two churches but to those also who watch the changing conditions of the times.

J. A. Melrose, the pastor, as well as those men and women and young people who have been actively interested in following an intelligent course are to be congratulated on successfully knitting together a close church relationship.

Don't be courteous in public conveyances, or people will think you are poor.
If a gentleman old enough to be your grandfather gets up to give you a seat, don't thank him, because you are doing him a favor. His legs would get stiff sitting so long.
If you get a seat alone in one of our close communion streetcars with cross seats that are supposed to accommodate two, always turn your knees toward the window. This will give you enough room between you and the side of the car for a half grown setter pup which you may have smuggled into the car, but will not leave sufficient room on the other end for anything but the hang over of your Mole Skin. It's the "big idea," try it.
These suggestions studiously observed show that you know things.

NO ROOM FOR HATE.
We have room for the man with an honest dream,
With his heart on fire and his eyes aglow;
We have room for the man with a purpose true,
Who comes to our shores to start life anew.
But we haven't an inch of space for him
Who comes to plot against life and limb.
We have room for the man who will learn our ways,
Who will stand by our flag in its troubled days;
We have room for the man who will till the soil,
Who will give his hands to a fair day's toil,
But we haven't an inch of space to spare

These are only the reported injuries. Many meet with accidents of which no record is kept, so that almost every time the clock ticks someone has been injured. If misfortune strikes you are you prepared? How about those dependent on you? You may rid yourself of this unpleasant thought at a cost of only 5c a day. Let us explain this proposition. Cheese, Wine, Handed Out By Pillagers

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Rome, Friday, June 13.—The disorders which began in Spozza, Thursday, continued today because of a lack of sufficient forces to check the crowds which were sacking the shops and distributing hats, shoes and provisions, showing particular preference for cheese, olive oil, and wines.

Hogheads of wine were rolled from winehops several miles to the city and distributed to the people amid tumultuous enthusiasm.

Later the mob stopped its pillaging tactics but took control of the market and obliged the merchants to sell at prices fixed by the people. Thus chickens which recently reached 35 apiece, sold for 11; olive oil, which had brought 50 cents a quart, sold for 25 cents, while thousands of bottles of fancy wines which had been selling at high prices, were poured out to the crowd for 20 cents.

Several thousand soldiers have been landed in the town and contingents of cavalry have been sent to Spozza to prevent further disorders.

40 GIRLS TO ENTER LLOYD JONES CAMP AT CLEAR LAKE

The Fresh Air Camp at Clear Lake which was established through the efforts of the Rev. Jenkins Lloyd Jones is to give enjoyment to a group of young people next week when about 40 Janesville girls of junior and high school age are to make up a camping party and be established there for a week.

The camp was started by Rev. Jones in connection with the social welfare work of Lincoln center, Chicago, and has been in operation about five years. At first it was a simple affair, but it has grown into a well-organized institution.

At first it was a simple affair, but it has grown into a well-organized institution. The camp is located on a beautiful lake and is surrounded by a dense forest.

About five years ago $500 was donated from funds held by the Janesville Social Church Society of Janesville, to build a cottage which is used for a dormitory. The church was the one in which Rev. Jones began his ministerial work.

The camping party was planned originally for the benefit of the girls of high school age belonging to the Queens of Avonlin, but as the use of the camp could only be secured at the same time as the dates of the Public school to be held in connection with the Sunday schools of the Federated and Baptist churches, it was decided to include girls of that age in all the societies, and take up the Bible study with the routine of camp life.

The junior girls are to go out for the week, and, going to the camp on Monday afternoon. The camp is to open Wednesday, June 18 and close June 26, and will have very close supervision. Mrs. L. A. Markham being in charge.

The plan is to have a picnic for each girl for an expense of about a dollar a day to each of the girls while there to pay for their food. Meals will be served cafeteria style. Four or five detailed each day to wash the dishes.

Although many of the girls have been further enrolled in the summer camp, at the office of the Federated church Monday, and girls of suitable age even if not belonging to the three church societies will be accommodated as long as there is room for them.

The use of cars to convey them to the camp is also solicited and those who can help in this way are asked to notify Mrs. Markham.

The list of articles necessary for each girl to take as announced by Mrs. Markham is as follows: Bible and note book, one blanket, sheet and pillow case, towels, one napkin, and personal toilet articles. The girls are especially requested to leave their good clothes at home.

The routine of camp life as announced by Mrs. Markham although it is subject to minor changes, will be as follows: rising hour at 6:20 with breakfast at 7 with general assembly and morning devotions at 8. Special announcement of the day will also be made at this time.

At 8:30 the Bible study begins lasting for one hour, then follows a period of organized play under the direction of Miss Foster. Swimming at 10:30 also is in charge of Miss Foster, who will be assisted by Mrs. Michaels and others. Lunch at noon and afternoon rest period until 1:30, when there will be art work in charge of Mrs. Michaels.

Some dramatic work is planned for the afternoon as it is hoped to work up something good to be given at the federation missionary meeting which is to be held at the supper and will be a sing-song, stunts by the girls, story telling and so forth. Bed time will be at 9 o'clock if Mrs. Markham can get her charges off in time to make it.

TRANS-CONTINENTAL FLIGHT NEW AIM OF U. S. FLIERS

Route of proposed trans-continental flight: (1) Minneapolis, L. I., starting point; (2) North Platte, Neb., scheduled landing point; (3) San Francisco, the finish. Photo is of Capt. Roy N. Francis, who will pilot the Martin bombing plane to be used for the trip.

A trans-continental airplane flight from Minneapolis, L. I., to San Francisco, with only one stop en route is to be attempted in a few days, according to an announcement by the war department.

Capt. Roy N. Francis will pilot the plane and First Lieut. Edward A. Clune, another skilled aviator, and two or three expert mechanics will accompany them.

Valuable meteorological information and other data will be gathered on the trip. The army hopes to make the trip a success to add its chapter to the aviation history being made by United States fliers.

The condition of the territory passed over will be tabulated from the standpoint of good and bad terrain for aerial routes. The total distance traveled will be about 2,750 miles, and the department estimates the trip will take thirty-two hours.

The airplane to be used was originally designed for military purposes as a day or night bombing plane or long distance photography. A war department statement says:

This airplane is particularly adaptable to the requirements of civil aeronautics for passenger, mail and express service, coast, border and forest patrol. This adaptation would not involve any important changes for the same machine, less the military equipment.

WINNIPEG LOCAL TRAFFIC IMPAIRED

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Winnipeg, June 14.—Although local service was somewhat impaired, trans-continental railroad traffic was not affected by the strike today by the action of local firemen and trainmen who voted Thursday to join the sympathetic strike of Winnipeg labor unions.

Because the railway brotherhoods repudiated the strike action of the locals, a majority of the Winnipeg railroad men decided last night to wait until today before deciding whether to join the union.

It was announced this morning that the railway executives have conferred with Senator R. S. Rogers, a federal minister of labor. It is understood that the brotherhood officers are interested in the new conciliation movement which was begun after a review of the strike action.

FAILURE OF LIGHTS HALTS CARNIVAL

Just as everyone was enjoying themselves at the carnival last night the lights went out. A large crowd had just gathered to witness the glass dancer. Everyone was interested and planning on seeing a great act when without any warning the lights in the tent went out.

A short-circuit spoiled the fun for a good many and the merry-go-round, the playground for the children, ceased operation and remained inactive for nearly two hours.

A crowd of electrical workers was called out and after a careful search discovered the trouble on North High street between West Milwaukee and High streets.

Large crowds continue to pack the streets where the shows are located and officials of the company and the concession people assert that business here far eclipses that of other cities played this season.

"Rome Wasn't Built In a Day"

By BILLY SUNDAY
(Famous Evangelist)

(Copyright, 1917, by The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

OF all the Ancient Alibis sprung by Ginks who are Weary of Work, the one that Gives me the Raz is that Antique Saying that "Rome was Built in a Day."

When a Lazy Loon gets the Old Call for not having Made a Showing on the Job, he Pulls that one about Rome. The same way with the Dilatory Duck who hasn't even Begun what He's Got to Do. He Eases his Way Out with the Long Whiskered Proverb about the Putting Up of the Italian Capital.

Of course, Rome was not Built in a Day. But Rome was STARTED in a Day, and a Good Many days and Years of Solid Work were Put In on it before it Became a Burg that could Brag about Itself.

Never Mind if you don't get Very Far on the Old Task the First morning It is Slipped to You. Just Plug Along that Afternoon and also That Night, and, by the Time a Couple of Days go by, you'll be Surprised to see how Much of the Road you have Covered.

Matty didn't Hurl the Fadeaway the First Time he went Into the Box for a Kid Club down in that Hick Town in Pennsylvania. He was probably Batted out. But he didn't Holler: "Aw, I'm no Good; I'm going to Give Up because I can't be a Pitcher in a Day."

But Day by Day and Year by Year he was Better—until he Had Them all Standing on their Heads, Chronically.

Ty Cobb, when he Started for Second in his First Game down Georgia Way, was Chucked Out. Standing Up, about Twenty Feet off the Bag. But he didn't Quit and say:

"Oh, Rome was not Built in a Day—I'll learn this Game some Other Time."

He Kept At it until he could pretty nearly Wait till the Catcher had the Ball in his Mitt and then Beat the Throw.

And This Speaker didn't Throw Away his Bat because he couldn't Locate the Pill the First Fling he had at the Horsehide, and Holler about Busting It some time in the Future.

That Stuff about Rome will never Get you Anywhere, Lads. And this Goes for your Business, for your Try at being a Better Guy, for Anything you Start that is Worth While:—

It's not the Showing of the First Day that Counts; it's the Fact that you've made a Start. When you have Made It, Keep Going. Never mind Trying to be a Star the First Time Out. But try to Work a Little Harder, to be a Little Decenter, as you Go Along, and the First Thing you Know you won't be Plugging, but you'll be Breozing. And the Further you Go, the Easier It will Get and the Faster you will Move.

Rome may not have been Finished in a Day, but they Built a lot of it with An Early Start. Don't Stall with Yourself.

THE WISHING PLANE

BY WILLIS WINTER

When Jane told Jack how she had become lost from Captain Brave and Ladydear while trying to help them find Jack, Jack thought things looked pretty hopeless, but when Jane told him that she was more than ever to find a way out of the fort. He helped Jane to her feet and gave her a good big hug and they started hand in hand to find a way out of the fort. Jane thought she remembered which tunnel had brought her to the gun and they followed this one. It must have been the wrong one though.

for instead of leading them to one of the huge cannons it brought them plump into the middle of a great big cave-like room. It was as big as the room in the church back home, Jack noticed. The walls were piled high with huge shells for the guns. Big cans were piled around the floor. Two or three of them were broken and Jack saw that they were filled with bullets for rifles and revolvers. Jack trembled when he thought what would happen if any of the big shells should explode.

He became frightened when over in one corner he noticed three or four giant rats. But when they saw him they ran away and became more frightened than he and hurried away. Jack was glad that Jane hadn't seen them, for Jane was terribly afraid of rats.

As Jack looked further around the room he noticed a table on which lay a dozen or more revolvers and rifles. Jack thought they must be loaded. As he looked at them a bright idea came to him. Rushing over to the table he seized two of the revolvers and then told Jane to follow him. Jack remembered by the way the boxes were piled around the entrance what door had led them into the room and so found his way out through the same tunnel without any trouble. The children hustled along the passageway until they came back to the big gun.

I wonder if you can guess what Jack was going to do? Well, I will tell you anyhow. He planned to fire off the revolvers in the hope that Captain Brave would hear the shooting and come to where he and Jane were.

Leaping up against the gun with the revolver in front of him, Jack pointed the pistol out through the opening and pulled the trigger. Because Jack was such a little boy and the revolver was such a big revolver the force of the explosion almost threw Jack on the ground and Jane jumped as high as she could. Jack gritted his teeth and holding the revolver up again he fired another shot. In fact he kept on firing until he had used up all the bullets in the revolver. He was just getting ready to fire the other revolver when Jane saw one of the opening through which the cannon was fired and she called to Jack so that he would not fire again and perhaps hurt Captain Brave.

A minute later the big man had lifted Jack and Jane out of the gun room onto the ground where Ladydear grabbed them up in her arms and hugged them and Booh ran around and around in a ring just like a trained dog in a circus to show how happy he was.

Dear Sir:

Dr. Bennett was right when he said that sham modesty and a false sense of "innocence" on the part of parents is to blame for the major portion of the sexual wrongdoing so prevalent throughout the world with its consequent wide-spread harvest of venereal diseases. Children should be told the truths of life in the right way and the parents are the proper persons to do this. But the average parent does not know how to tell life's story in the sweet, effectual way in which it should be told to produce good and not harmful results. This picture "Open Your Eyes" is particularly good in that it portrays how such information may be rightly imparted.

Yours very truly,

A CHANCE TO LIVE

HOLOCAUST!

Fortunately the busy season was on at the factory. There was plenty of overtime work, and undertime, too. Grimly setting aside all other purposes but work, Annie rose in the chill dawn, moving softly about the room for her dressing and her meager breakfast of coffee and bread, and touched the factory at seven.

With this extra hour and an evening or two a week, she added two or three dollars to her wages of twelve. Every night she was not at the shop, Annie's whole being was soon concentrated upon just one thing—to keep awake; not to succumb to the deadly craving for sleep and rest that was forever assailing her.

When at last she fell into bed at night she feared not waking in time. Despite her tiredness she slept fitfully and woke with dull aching head and frayed nerves. One day the foreman found some slips of paper covered with shorthand characters on her sewing machine.

"So here is why you don't keep your mind on your work, my fine lady," he sneered, flinging the papers into the waste barrel. "Shop work, already, is not good enough for you, he?"

And at the night class her teacher would say: "You'll never get your diploma if you don't concentrate on these word signs, Miss Hargan. I'm afraid you're not earnest enough."

Wish to make high-class work? If I can just hold on until June!" Annie would tell herself, trying to shut out the discouragements that beset her. Just last June!

It was Saturday afternoon at the factory. There being no night school Saturdays, Annie was going to work overtime at the shop. It was hot and stuffy, and she had been working poorly. There had been newcomers taken in to fill the places of a number of Jewish girls who, led by "The Firebrand," had joined a union and were on strike for a Saturday half holiday. The new girls were Italians, who spoke little English and knew nothing of unions. They were "green hands." Annie had often, to stop and help them when their stitching went wrong—as Yetta Kaplin had once so gladly helped her.

About the middle of the afternoon she risked the foreman's displeasure to get a drink from the tin cooler behind the partition. Annie stood sipping the cold water and watching the new girls as they bent earnestly to their machines their whole meager minds on their task. Behind them every now and then came the foreman, urging them to hurry or grudgingly helping when some thing ran askew. They were even more helpless, more poorly equipped for the life struggle than herself, Annie mused. Poor, driven things, unaccustomed to the new land, ignorant of their rights—and their wrongs.

Something recalled to her mind the locked door to the fire escape, and the other locked door which was never opened at all except when they worked late at night and the main entrance was closed. She put down the cup, glanced towards that door, catching her breath.

A thin scurgle of blueish smoke seeped from under it. From a crack beneath the wooden shelves holding bolts of lawn, rose another faint trail of smoke. She stared unable to realize the dread thing it portended of the thing she had thought of, but only as a remote threat, like the ever-stirring fires of volcanoes at the foot of which people build homes, spellbound, the space behind the partition grew hazy. There was a faint smell of smoke in the hot air. A little tongue of flame, yellow-orange, almost playful looking, shot from the base-board and vanished again. It struck light into her befogged brain. In one galvanizing instant she realized the building was afire. The very boards beneath her feet were warm.

COSTUMES OF THE 1919 SUMMER GIRL ARE FRILLS AND RUFFLES FROM HEAD TO TOE

BY ELOISE

Happy, indeed, are the young girls who are going vacationing this summer, whether it be to the country, the seashore, or just traveling about in week-end parties. Some of them have not taken a minute off since they began their war duties and they are going to spend this summer in reconstruction work. They are going to reconstruct frilly, lacy wardrobes and trimmings. Many of the trimmings of past days are being revived, tiny ruffles, fluting, lace and insertion to match, little embroidery medallions and pipings and bows of satin ribbon.

The sports clothes will still be seen everywhere, but they will no longer hold absolute sway over the summer wardrobe. The more elaborate and fussy frock is coming into its own for at least this summer. Here is one of the prettiest of afternoon frocks which one of the Fifth Avenue shops in New York is showing. It is a charming costume for the afternoon tea or the hotel veranda or the little informal garden party or dance. Rose colored chiffon forms the underskirt with tiny satin ruffles at the hem. Flowered chiffon forms the blouse and full tunic which does not meet in the front. The demure round neck, short sleeves and ruffled tunic are all edged with the little satin ribbon ruffles. The smart mushroom shaped leg-horn is also trimmed with ruffles. Alternate rows of tiny georgette ruffles and satin cover the entire crown and brim. The parasol is Dresden silk and ivory.

smoker of 16 wouldn't last long in a hard scrap.

The sergeant no doubt meant well when he handed the 16-year-old boy a big cigar. But I'd keep an eye on the sergeant with such notions of manhood. In fact, if it were printable, I have a letter right on my desk now from another boy, this one in the Canadian army, who was encouraged in a serious misstep by his sergeant.

So far as I know, the use of tobacco by grown men often seems to be harmless. But any doctor knows the use of tobacco by immature youths is sure to do them harm.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
Is the spring tonic of one-third sulphur and two-thirds cream of tartar mixed with molasses good for me? I take, or is it an old-fashioned theory? Also, when one has not the opportunity to do much walking is there any special exercise one can take at home to keep the liver in good condition? I am 24 years old, and have been quite sallow of late, which makes me think my liver is out of condition. (Mrs. W. L. G.)

ANSWER—Sulphur is a laxative. Cream of tartar is a mild diuretic (increases flow of urine). Molasses is a good food. Sallow complexion is due to an overworked stomach. Take six pills before breakfast every morning and six more at bedtime. For keeping in good physical condition the year round, a regular schedule of rest exercises should be followed before dressing in the mornings and after undressing at night. Send S. A. E. for detailed description of such exercises.

TRIED RECIPES.

Fricassee of Lamb—Order three pounds of lamb from forequarter. Cut in pieces for serving. Wipe meat, put in kettle, cover with boiling water. Cook until tender. Cool, sprinkle with salt and pepper, dredge with flour, and saute in mutton fat. Arrange on platter and pour around one and one-half cups of sauce. Sauce: Brown sugar, two cups; butter, two tablespoons; salt, one-half teaspoon; pepper, one-half teaspoon. Boil five minutes. Pour over meat. Peel the crust with sliced peaches (canned peaches can be used); pour in an ordinary custard; mix, adding an extra tablespoon of sugar, and bake slowly until the custard sets. Bake in a hot oven. Put in a baked crust with baked or boiled custard poured over makes a good pie.

Baking Powder Brown Sugar Wheels—One cup brown sugar, two cups flour, two teaspoons soda, two teaspoons salt, two tablespoons shortening, two cups butter, three-quarters cup milk. Sift flour, baking powder and salt into bowl, add shortening and rub in very lightly with milk slowly, enough to be able to handle the dough and roll out half inch thick. Spread with melted butter, cover with brown sugar and roll same as jelly roll; then cut in inch pieces, grease plate very lightly, set the wheels in cut side up, brush top with milk and bake 15 to 20 minutes in hot oven; remove from tins at once, as the sugar will get hard. Be careful in baking that they do not burn. The top rack of the oven is best to use.

BREAKFAST DISHES.

Omelet—Place the yolks of three eggs in a bowl and beat with two spoons of milk, one-half cup of prepared bread, two tablespoons of finely minced parsley, tablespoon of salt, one-half teaspoon of pepper. Mix and then cut and fold in the stiffly beaten whites of three eggs and then place four tablespoons of shortening in a frying pan. When smoking hot pour in the omelet and cook until firm, then turn either by lifting or rolling, using the cake turner or spatula, or it can be turned into another hot pan, containing one tablespoon of shortening, then fold and roll.

How to prepare the bread: Soak stale bread in hot water to soften and then place in a cloth and squeeze dry.

Hashed Brown Potatoes—Peel cold, boiled potatoes and then cut in three quarters inch dice. Dust well with flour and then place four tablespoons of shortening in a frying pan and when smoking hot add the potatoes. Turn gently until nicely browned and add the seasoning.

Waffles—Place in a mixing bowl one egg, one cup of milk, one and one-quarter cups of flour, two teaspoons of baking powder, one teaspoon of sugar, two tablespoons of shortening. Beat to a mix and then bake in a hot well-greased waffle iron.

TAKING YOUR DREAMS TO WORK.
On a single task continuously. He thinks of the automobile he is going to buy or the show he is going to see or the raise he thinks he ought to have. Or if he is a sho, she thinks of the silk stockings she saw marked from two dollars to a dollar nineteen, and considers whether she will get them or a detachable vest that would give a touch of smartness to her last year's blue suit. She is Thinking Whether Jimmy Was Really Serious.
Or perhaps her lips curve in happy reminiscence of what Jimmy said last night, and then her brows pucker in consideration of just how much he meant by it. And then if she is a typist she writes "Your offer of the nineteenth 'refused' instead of 'received'." Or if she is a shop girl she hands out taffeta ribbon when the customer distinctly said satin.

When Half One's Mind Escapes.
And even when one keeps one's body and part of one's mind at one task the other half is apt to stray off and betray one into doing work that does represent half one's full capacity.

"Long hours of labor," writes one of the most successful men of his day, are valueless if the mind wanders. The average man rarely sets the undivided forces of his mind to work.

The Sanitary All-Gas Kitchen

PICTURE to yourself this kitchen in operation—the Ruud Automatic Gas Water Heater in the basement, without any attention save the turn of a faucet, supplying you with unlimited, inexpensive, pure hot water. Unlimited because the water runs piping hot as long as the faucet remains open—the laundry and bath supplied at the same time. Inexpensive because the Ruud is self-operating and burns gas only while you are drawing hot water. Pure because the water is heated as it passes through the long copper heating coils direct from the water main.

Think of the Modern Gas Range, especially equipped for any mode of cooking, heat easily regulated to a "just right" temperature, no dirt, no ashes, no excessive labor, and all this comfort and convenience at a low cost for gas.

The best demonstration of the merits of these "comfort makers" is to see them in operation at our showroom, or a postal will bring you complete information by return mail.

Heart and Home Problems

BY ELIZABETH THOMPSON

LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO MRS. THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) Will you please say how you fix asparagus on toast? Do you eat it with a fork or spoon?

(2) I would like to secure a book on manners, telling how and when to use forks, and would also like to have a book of social usage, giving the many things needed for today's etiquette in school life. Will you please state names of these books and prices?

(3) Should one seal invitations or answers?

PEGGY.
(1) Cut the asparagus in pieces about an inch long; take care not to cut after the stalks sufficient salt. Boil this with sufficient salt. When the asparagus is cooked through, remove from the stove. Make a cream sauce, such is used for creamed potatoes, with butter, flour and milk. After the cream is added, pour the asparagus into the cream sauce. Pour this over toast.

Asparagus on toast should be eaten with a fork.

(2) It is against the policy of the club to give recommendations which would advertise.

You can get the information you desire about the books at the library or at a book store. Invitations and answers should be sealed. Sometimes, however, when they are formal and printed or engraved, they are placed in an envelope which is not sealed. This envelope is placed in another for mailing which is sealed.

If you write an invitation or answer in long hand, it is correct to seal the envelope.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Do you ever get letters from boys? I guess maybe they need advice sometimes, too, but because you aren't a boy, I guess you won't know how to give it. I have it. My stepfather doesn't like me and my mother is afraid of him. He beats me almost every night, and I never can go any places like other boys.

swimming or anything. He wants to take me out of school, because he says I am too big to be leading around. I am thirteen.

Now I want to know, isn't there some law which makes parents send their kids to school? I would like to be an engineer. Not just a fireman on a train, but an engineer and in-ventor. I want to measure off miles of railroad track.

There ought to be some way for you to get an education. You ought not to have graduated from the grammar school.

Tell the principal of your school what you have told me. I may be that your father can be influenced by the principal. If not you will receive valuable advice from the principal in regard to further education.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Your advice to "Constance K." is good. It seems to me that what she needs is not only advice, but help—not so much to get her in new environments as a true friend when she gets there—one to help her find right friends and work. Then if she will follow your advice she can throw off the past, make a new life and live for the future, realizing that to be down is not to be out, except to those who will it so.

From her letter I believe there is something to that girl. If you will give me her address I will get in touch with her and let her see that everybody is not down on her.

M. S.
It is a comfort to realize that there are people in the world who are ready to help a girl like "Constance K." Of course there is "something" to that girl, and you may be the helping hand to lift her out of her present condition.
I am keeping your address and if "Constance K." will send her's I will mail it to you.

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO DR. BRADY, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

A QUESTION FOR UNCLE SAM.

"Dear Doctor Brady: In the Health Talks written by you I read that 'The Red is a Good Remedy.' Now, I wish to state the manner in which I came to smoke cigarettes. I am a boy of 16 and have recently been discharged from the United States marine corps—honorably. I enlisted at the age of 15, but of course had to secure my parents' permission. I was sent to the music range to learn to blow a trumpet. While in training none of the boys, who were between the ages of 15 and 18, were allowed to smoke. Now, as soon as a boy became rated or could blow a trumpet perfectly he was allowed to smoke. Also congress has passed a bill allowing boys who are rated trumpeters of the U. S. M. C. to smoke.

The very day I became rated the sergeant congratulated me and handed me a big cigar. From then on I became a smoker.
Now, Dr. Brady, can you blame me, a boy of 16, for smoking? And do you think you could not trust me

Hazelton's Stories Of Forest, Field and Stream

ACUDUBON, THE NATURALIST.

(By William C. Hazelton.)

Who hath seen the beaver busted?
Who hath watched the black-tail mating?
Who hath lain alone to hear the wild geese
Who hath walked the chosen water-where the ouananiche is waiting, Or the sea-trout's jumping-crazy for the fly?

Audubon was a man of genius, with the courage of a lion and the simplicity of a child. One scarcely needs to admire the mighty determination which enabled him to carry out his great work in the face of difficulties so huge, or the gentle and guileless sweetness which he throughout shared with his wife and children. The name of Audubon is of French origin; it is extremely rare, and while confined in America to the family of the naturalist, it has in France been traced only among his ancestry. His father was one of 20 children, only two of which were boys.

Up to the present Audubon's birth, origin and early history were shrouded in mystery. Conflicting stories abounded, and even Audubon's descendants did not know the truth. Dr. Herrick after long and careful research, discovered a Franco-American family which completely upset the stories hitherto accepted. Audubon was not born in Louisiana, as was supposed, but in 1780, but in 1785. His mother was a French creole, Mlle. Rabin. She died before he was a year old.

Audubon married Lucy Bakewell, an English girl in Pennsylvania. She was ever his devoted companion. His life was as chequered and adventurous as that of any hero of romance. Born in a quiet little French village, pioneer woodman in the new world during early manhood; penniless painter at 25, and the London acclimated scientist, Audubon sounded the full gamut of human experience.

The naturalist was born at Les Cayes, Santo Domingo, on the early April 26, 1785. He spent his early boyhood on his father's plantation near New Orleans, and his earliest recollections are associated with lying among the flowers of orange trees, and watching the movements of the mocking-bird, "the king of song," dear to him in after life from many associations.

Audubon was an admirable marksman, a clever rider, an expert swimmer, possessed great activity, prodigious strength, and was notable for the elegance of his figure and the beauty of his face. He was aided by his careful attention to his dress. Besides other accomplishments, he was a musician of ability, a good fencer, and danced well.

Audubon's many adventures in the wild parts of America, making several trips up and down the Mississippi and Ohio rivers, and on one occasion meeting the famous hunter, Daniel Boone, and the night hunt with Boone and saw him perform his feat of barking squirrels. Boone told him many of his thrilling adventures among the Indians.

Audubon also made a trip up the Missouri and Yellowstone rivers and visited among the Indian tribes. He was then between 60 and 70 years of age, and near the end of his life. He was a man of indomitable spirit; otherwise he would not have achieved so much. He must wander; he must have adventures; he must acquire; he must never quit his post. His nature was passionate indeed, pursuing in all regions, burning in him to the last. He was boy-like to the end, glorying most when old doors. (Excerpt from London edition of his works.)

The works of Audubon are pronounced by Baron Cuvier to be "the most splendid monument which art has erected in honor of observation." "Chapman North says, 'He was the greatest genius in his own walk, that ever lived.'"

Probably no other undertaking of Audubon's life illustrates the indomitable character of the man more fully than the work preliminary to the publication of his great work, "The Birds of America." Having gone to England, he had no friends save those he had made in a few months and no money, and the undertaking which was to cost over one hundred thousand dollars, and with no pledge of help, but on the other hand discouragement on all sides, he was to undertake the hopelessness of such an enterprise.

Audubon was honored in England and Scotland by Sir Walter Scott, Landseer, the Earl of Selkirk, and other nobles. Likewise, in France by Baron Cuvier, Prince Bonaparte, the Royal Academy and many other nobles.

At different periods of his life he earned his livelihood by selling drawings and paintings which he made of the sitters. This talent was most useful to him.

When he went to England he was penniless, but had letters of introduction which aided him greatly.

Rufus W. Griswold thus describes Audubon's appearance as it was shortly after his return from the Northwest: "I awaited him in his studio and studied the exquisite drawings and paintings scattered over the walls of the room. The master now made his appearance. He was a tall, thin man, with a high, arched and serene forehead, and a bright, penetrating gaze. His hair was white, and his eyes were blue. He greeted me with a frank and cordial, and showed you the sincere, true man. The wonderful simplicity of the man was perhaps his most impressive feature. His unconscious greatness seemed to be only equalled by his child-like tenderness.

"When I left, I said to him, 'I have seen Audubon, and I am very thankful.'"

"You have seen a poor old man," said he, clasping my hand in his, and he was as gentle as a child. He had measured life by what he had done, and he seemed to himself to be old.

"It is hard to confine one's self to dates and times when contemplating such a man as Audubon. He belongs to all time. He was born, but he can never die."

He suffered many hardships during his trips through the wilderness first and last, but never complained. Edward B. Clark writes: "The simple truth is spoken when it is said that the Audubon societies formed for the protection of the wild birds of America are carrying forward their work not only in the name of Audubon, but in the spirit which was the great naturalist's guide."

"Some men have said that Audubon was an impractical man, a dreamer. Too, but the world is better for his dreams. The business man of large affairs looks with a sort of pitying arrogance upon the man who loves the woods rather than the counting house. The man who goes to the woods with a purpose in his heart has chosen the better part. The impractical Audubon will live when these who called him dreamer are forgotten."

"Just as sunset was flooding the pure, snow-covered landscape with golden light, at 5 o'clock on Monday, June 27, 1895, a parakeet-like, beautiful and swift, outsoared the shadow of our night."

NATURE NOTES.
There is no game bird that flies anywhere on this continent to be compared with the ruffed grouse—particularly the ruffed grouse of late fall or early winter. Of course, the ruffed grouse is a noble bird, no matter where you find him. But he suits the New England country well and that country suits him. He is in his element there, and the sportsman who brings him fairly to bag must be something more than a tyro.

It matters not whether he be found on the hillside, in the big woods, in thick swamp-land, or in the alder swales, he is always the same wary fellow—keen of sight and hearing, and swift of wing. To get him, the sportsman must be alert, else the bird will fly away with a wing before the gun can be brought to bear on him. In spite of his great cunning, he will fly fairly well to the point of a good shot or pointer. But the good dog which can fairly be regarded as a ruffed grouse dog must have a genius for his work. And this genius must be carefully cultivated and developed. What a thrill to kill one of these red birds over a point!—C. B. Whitford.

The pioneer of American ornithologists was Alexander Wilson, a Scotch weaver, who came to America in 1794, and, animated by a passionate love of nature, studied the birds of America in their native haunts, producing a work remarkable for the beauty and the beautiful colored plates prepared from drawings made by his own hand with which it is adorned.

Then came Audubon, who, having the observations of Wilson before him, pushed his researches still further and produced the magnificent work in seven volumes, which, with the exquisite colored plates, will ever remain a glorious monument to his genius. Audubon was followed by Dr. Elliott Coues, Ridgway and others.—Hazelton.

One of the fine coastal sights in New England is the spring flight of the elder ducks. During the early days of April, a flock or two of these birds, coming all the time, pass on their way north. Each flock is led by a male—a striking creature with his white back, black wings and head, and his long, straight bill. The females alternate with the males more or less irregularly, and the string of the large, swiftly moving fowl, fifty to a hundred or more in number, is an impressive sight. It is not until the middle of the nesting season of certain other ducks which do not go to the remote North, we shall have to explore the Atlantic Coast region. It is no more than a matter of time, then, as we search for wild game that we have a great deal more respect for wild life in general, and in most cases if there were no game laws, the wild game would need have no fear of being exterminated at the hand of game laws. For the most part, the hunters were game breeders, a game hog would be a thing of history, instead of such a pronounced reality.—T. B. Hinde.

I do not wonder that the old French voyageurs loved the Illinois river, and risked their lives and their fortunes gladly to visit and to dwell by it. The fascination that it had for them, for Joliet, for LaSalle, for Marquette, and for the countless explorers who frequented this trail to the Southwest, still lies upon it, waiting for the first canoe to enter its restless channel, its green-clad, bordering hillsides, its fabulous grain-fields, its forests, its weedy and waving the drifting traveler a spell which he is loath to break.—Hazelton.

We may felicitate ourselves on the class of men which compose the great brotherhood of sportsmen. As you acquaintanceship with the great outdoors, it is a pleasure to note the splendid personality of the men who are interested in the grand sport of wild-fowl hunting. They are not confined to one section of the country. They are to be found in all parts of our land. Some live in the country; some live in the city; one encounters them everywhere, and always there is that friendly feeling that brotherly spirit, which marks the true man.

How ready and how willing sportsmen are to help each other in numberless ways! It is not finally the true test of what a real man is, but the way in which he helps others. It is a kindness and generosity toward his fellowmen!

Brothers of the gun, there is no branch of sport or of study in which there are finer specimens of true manhood or a closer comradeship than among the duck and goose hunters of America.—Hazelton.

Will Leading Society Belles Today Wed Nobility or Untitled Heroes?

The war has brought many changes, all leading toward the democratizing of the old world. The query is raised as to whether the wedding of American society belles to European nobility will continue in vogue or whether these beautiful U. S. women will give their hearts to men who have gained fame and fortune in war.

The three beautiful women above were popular American society girls who married into families of the old world nobility.

Princess Adolphe, formerly Dorothy Deacon of Boston, wife of the head of the Polish House of Radziwill, is about to resume her station her station as social leader in her husband's court now that the end of the war has assured her safety there. She was compelled by the terrible bombardments in the vicinity to flee from the Polish capital, Lodz. Her first refuge was in Rome. Then she went to London and was thereafter active in war work, notably for Polish and Russian relief.

The princess has enjoyed the respect of the nobility and great popularity among the masses since she forced her husband's family to recognize her social position as on a parity with their own. Since then the Almanac de Gotha, social register of the titled stock of Europe, has accorded her every honor to which she laid claim, and the relatives of her husband regard her with pride as really one of themselves.

graphs is of Lady Maudstone, daughter of Anthony Drexel of Philadelphia, and wife of Guy Montague Finch-Hatton, Viscount Maudstone, who was decorated with the Croix de Guerre for bravery in action in France. He is older son and heir to the Earl of Winchelsea and Nottingham. They have a son, known as the Hon. Christopher Finch-Hatton, and two little daughters.

Society is preparing to welcome the Princess Miguel de Braganza, who is coming to this country soon with her three children to visit her mother, Mrs. Jean de St. Cyr, at the latter's home in California. The princess, a son of the Duc Miguel de Braganza, for years pretended to the Portuguese throne, and grandson of Dom Miguel, who was deposed as king of Portugal in 1833.

is the principal cause of the ocean tides, and this explains why the high and low tides come about an hour later each day.

The moon is about 2,160 miles in diameter, and its surface area is about one-thirtieth that of the earth. It seems to have reached a stage where it can truly be termed lifeless. Since the development of the telescope careful study has been made down to this day. The entire topography seems absolutely fixed.

The surface of the moon is rough, containing a number of large mountains and a great many individual volcanic craters on the earth. The naked eye sees patches of darker color on the moon's disk, but in the telescope these are seen to be extremely rough and by no means to bear out their ancient name of "seas."

The moon has no atmosphere, or practically none. Everything is seen from the earth with the sharpness of an engraving. No clouds ever obscure the view, and when the moon intercepts itself between us and a star, "occults" a star, the disappearance takes place with extreme suddenness, instead of the gradual blurring out which would take place if the moon possessed an atmosphere of any appreciable density. This is another reason why the moon is so important factor in changing things on the earth.

All the light which comes to us from the moon is light which the moon reflects to us, for the moon has no light of its own. Therefore only half of the moon is lit up, the half turned toward the sun, the other half remaining dark. When the moon is at the point where the earth's shadow is a position directly between us and the sun the bright half is directly away from us; when the moon is on the side of the earth opposite to that of the sun the moon's surface, which is lit up by the sun, is also turned entirely toward the earth, and we have full moon. When the moon is about half way between these two positions, the moon is at right angles to us and half away, a phase is illegitimate known as half-moon and first or third quarter, depending upon whether the full moon is the next or the previous phase. This true explanation of the lunar phases was first presented by the Greek philosopher, Aristotle.

WITH THE WOMEN OF TODAY

Miss Laura Clay, pioneer woman suffrage worker of the south, for 25 years president of the Kentucky Equal rights association, since the fight for the 19th amendment in that state, has exploded a veritable bombshell in suffrage circles of the state by an open declaration of her withdrawal from the organization which she helped build to power in the past. She states as her reason the fact that the Susan B. Anthony amendment, as adopted by congress and supported by the Kentucky suffrage organization, hands over the management of state elections to federal authority and violates states rights.

"In my opinion," declares the veteran suffrage worker, in explaining her resignation, "to call the Anthony amendment a suffrage amendment at all is a deceptive misnomer. Of course, it incidentally does secure suffrage to women where there has been no state provision to give it to them, but judging and naming it by its most pertinent and extensive effect, it should be called plainly an amendment to establish federal control of state elections."

"The wisest settlement," Miss Clay concludes, "is the faithful performance by the democratic and republican parties to the pledges of their national platforms of 1915 to extend suffrage to women by state action. This will give satisfaction to all the people and will not deprive them of the right of self-government which they now possess."

Those acquainted with the history of the south just prior to the outbreak of the civil war will recall the name of Miss Clay's father, Cassius M. Clay, a picturesque and fiery politician, a statesman who fought over the matter of states rights more than half a century ago. He issued the paper devoted to attacking slavery, which aroused such indignation that it was stopped when a mob seized the press. He later became a leader in

Resume of Moving Picture Programs of Last Week

(By MRS. ABBIE HELMS.)

Re-employment of returned soldiers by former employers has been brought to the attention of the public by slides issued by the government. Also there was a call for enlistment of young men for reserve service in the new reel shown at a local theater where sanitary care of a baby is shown by the routine work of bathing and feeding the infants in a hospital.

Airplanes are still the center of interest to film folks, and pictures are exhibited showing the government ships making their lane of safety across the Atlantic when the planes mark their celebrated flight.

The Beverly had William Russell in "Some Lads" for its Saturday attraction, which had a lot of funny situations in its make-up. The hero, a brave man, and after telling wonderful tales of his prowess, was nearly hung rather than back down from his statements. The Sunday program was "The Amateur Adventurer," in which while a really good, girl, she acts about deliberately to ensure an idiotic rich man in the role of vampire. She succeeds admirably and delicately plays the character, where modesty and good sense are combined with women's wiles.

A return date of Nazimova in "Out of the Fog" was the midweek offering at the Atlantic, when a new and novel view of this wonderful character study. The dual character of mother and daughter gives Nazimova opportunities for the tragic quality, and also the light character of the emotions of the untrained child. In the latter her portrayal of shifting emotions is a marvel of artistic ability.

Thelma Greener and Carlisle Blackwell presented a bright little comedy story which had to do with bug hunters and scientists, Thursday. The hero was a press agent and wooed ardently the niece of a scientific man with all success until he happened to meet her life. Then he won fortune and bride at once.

At the Majestic the Sunday picture was "The Struggle for the Throne," which had to do with the eternal problem of good and evil struggling for mastery. The star, represented the alluring body, charming and with untrained capabilities, who tries to ensure the mind as represented by a young professor. His brother, a young minister, represents the spiritual qualities of mankind.

"Loves Auction" was rather a harrowing story, with a girl who is a band, a discarded lover and a fakir exploiting a new cult of thought are mixed up in the plot. Some good acting but not of any great value, as no aspect seems to be of any great value. The picture was the much talked of "The Old Maid's Baby," which was the Wednesday picture, and the circus scenes and interesting features lent a novel setting for the little star. The tiny darkey boy was there, as well as the clever lame dog which is seen so often in the movies and which is a picture of a human. The whole picture is well well perfect from the standpoint of a children's picture, and should be given at a children's matinee at some future date.

The Sunday picture at the Myers theater was "What Every Woman Wants," with Grace Darmond as star. She is a poor girl made for show clothes and enraging her employer to secure them. A sensational scene shows her former lover concealed in a closet after the husband is shot, but it comes out that he was killed by a maid whom he had suspected of theft.

The next offering was a western story with lots of hard riding and thrilling encounters with the Indians. Harry Carey is the cowboy, and the story "A Light for Love," is located in the northwest. A battle royal staged in canoes is one of the interesting features. The giant pines form a fine background to the tale.

The "Open Your Eyes," is sanctioned by the national board of health and depicts the consequences of a double standard of morals. An interesting story with a capable cast is in the picture, and the director is hostile to call a spade a spade, yet the whole tone of the production is of high class.

A clever mystery story was shown at the Apollo, Monday, "Cheating Chances," which had a girl who is supposed to be the daughter of a wealthy family in adjacent houses. In one of the families Clara Kimball Young was supposed to be the adopted daughter, but both of them were really gangs of thieves who were supposed to be locked in the deserted house. When Clara had seemed to belong to the gang and help in their plotting, it turned out that she was at the head of an elaborate bureau of thieves, who were trying to steal the money.

"The Hollow of Her Hand" is also a mystery story where a neglected wife picks up a husband and shatters in her own home. For revenge because she does not like her husband's family she tries to marry the girl who is the daughter of the family. It turns out that she killed him herself in self-defense.

"The Probation Wife" of Norma Tallmadge shows her working in a tough case. The husband is supposed to be a man who is working in an ice wagon. A social worker disappointed in love marries her to keep her from being sent back. Later her former husband heartily repents and she shows that she is a woman who can play at that game and drums up an admirer; then he gets jealous and keeps his affections for his home.

The following letter is from Newport, R. I., which for many years has been the one great summer resort of the millionaires.

"The most interesting towns in my time—has built up so fast in the last few years that it seems to be almost impossible to get the show ground. I have been to Newport during the season and the afternoon and night shows were packed. And many of the millionaires took many of the show people to their cottages that cost millions of dollars, and they had beautiful stables, some of them having 20 or more horses. And if the circus was as interesting to them as the show people, then they certainly got the worth of their money."

"The big circuses have been forced to drop Newport because of inability to protect their animals which were to show. A medium sized show, was booked to appear here this week, but the date for some reason was pushed back three weeks. The lot is now in the hands of a contractor who is building an estate agent is trying to find another show ground. Extensive building operations are said to be the reason for lack of grounds large enough for circuses."

The following letter of elephants went in a rampart last week, puts me in mind of the 29 elephants which went in nearly that many directions in Newport, R. I., when lightning struck the big elephant and killed him. Only that it took our elephant men four days to gather them back to the show.

"Marblehead, Mass., May 23.—The police and scores of citizens engaged in an elephant hunt here today. Four of the big animals broke away from their keepers while preparations were being made for the circus. The Peabody circus which showed here yesterday, they headed for the woods along the shore of Salem harbor. The elephants finally were captured after their keepers had entered the woods with peanuts and bananas."

and George Nicoll Barnes and Lord Robert Cecil of the British delegation.

One American delegate told them that women would participate in the various peace treaties provided by the peace treaty. Mr. Barnes said that nothing prevented the governments from appointing a woman to be appointed to membership in the commission on international labor agitation, while Mr. Robert Cecil repeated his assurance that women could not be the highest posts in the league of nations.

WOMEN AND THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.
Word comes from overseas that Jane Addams, Chrysalis MacMillan and the other delegates appointed by the women's international conference for permanent peace at Zurich to present resolutions and counter proposals have been received by Capt. "I did nothing, sir, but eat my dinner, and drink that claret you were kind enough to give me."

"The half-bottle of claret?"

"Yes, sir, the very same."

"Well, there was nothing to hurt you in that," I said. "Did you take it half and half with water, as I told you?"

"I did indeed, sir."

"It's very funny," I said. And then as he began to writhe and stiffen, I called out to Tom: "Get some rum, Tom, and make it boiling hot; quick—quick! We must get him into a sweat."

Very soon we did. Then I said to Tom:

"What do you make out of this smell that's coming from him, Tom?"

"Kerosene, sir," said Tom.

"I thought the very same," I said.

Tom beckoned me to go with him to the galley, and showed me several quart bottles of water standing on a shelf.

"Two of these were kerosene," he said "and I suppose Cap made a mistake;" for one looked as clear as the other.

Then I took one of them back to the captain.

"Was it a bottle like this you mixed with the claret?" I asked.

"Sure it was, sir," he answered, writhing hard with the cramps.

"But man!" I said. "Couldn't you tell the difference between that and water?"

"I thought it tasted funny, boss, but I wasn't used to claret."

And then we had to laugh again, and I thought old Tom would die.

"A nigger's stomach and his head," said the commandant, "are about the same. I really don't know which is the stronger."

The captain didn't die, though he came pretty near to it. In fact, he took so long getting on his feet, that we couldn't wait for him; so we had practically to look out for a new crew, with the exception of Tom, and Salter; the commandant proved a good friend to us in this, choosing three somewhat characterless men, with good "character."

As we said goodbye, with a spanking southwest breeze blowing, I could see that he was a little anxious about me.

"Take care of yourself," he said, "for you must remember none of us can take care of you. There's no settlement where you're going—no telegraph or wireless; you could be murdered, and none of us hear of it for a month, or forever. And the fellows you're after are a dangerous lot, take my word for it. Keep a good watch on your guns, and we'll be on the lookout for the first news of you, and anything we can do we'll be there, you bet."

CHAPTER VI.

In Which the Sucking Fish Has a Chance to Show Its Virtue.

The breeze was so strong that we didn't use our engine that day. Besides, I wanted to take a little time thinking over my plans. I spent most of the time studying the charts and pondering John P. Tobias' narrative, which threw very little light on the situation. There was little definite to go by but his mark of the compass engraved on a certain rock in a wilderness of rocks; and such rocks as they were at that.

I looked well to my guns. The commandant had made me accept the loan of a particularly expert revolver that was, I could see, as the apple of his eye. He must have cared for me a great deal to have lent it me, and it was right as the things we love.

Then I called Tom to me. "How about that sucking fish, Tom?" I asked.

"It's just cured, sir," he said. "I was going to offer it to you this lunch time. It's dried out fine; couldn't be better. I'll bring it to you this minute." And he went and was back again in a moment. "You must wear it right over your heart," he said, "and you'll see there's not a bullet can get near it. It's never been known for a bullet to go through a sucking fish. It's God's truth."

"But, Tom," I said, "how about you?"

"I've worn one here, sir, for twenty years, and you can see for yourself!"

and ne dared the brown chest beneath which beat the heart that like nothing else in the world has made me believe in God."

We awoke to a dawn that was a rose planted in the sky by the mysterious hand that seems to love to give the fairest thing the loveliest setting.

But there was no wind, so that day we ran on gasoline. We had some fifty miles to go to where the narrative pointed, a smaller car, the cay known in old days as "Dead Men's Shoes"—but since known by another name which, for various reasons, I do not deem it polite to divulge—near the end of the long cay down which we were running.

About twilight we dropped anchor in another quiet bay, so much like that of the night before, as all the bays and cays are along that coast, that you need to have sailed them from boyhood to know one from another.

The cove we were looking for, known by the cheery name of Dead Men's Shoes, proved farther off than we expected, so that we didn't come to it till toward the middle of the next afternoon, an afternoon of the most innocent gold that has ever thrown its soft radiance over an earth inhabited for the most part by ruffians and scoundrels. We soon found that we were not alone in the cave.

"She's changed her paint," said Tom, at my elbow. And, looking round, I saw that our rakish schooner with the black hull was now white as a dove; and in that soft golden water, hardly a foot and a half deep, five shadowy young sharks floated, with outstretched fins like huge bats. Our engineer, who was already wading fearlessly in the water, beautifully naked, "shooed" them off like chickens. But it was soon to be evident that more dangerous foes waited for us on the shore.

Yet there was seemingly nothing there but a pile of sponges, and a few black men. The Susan B. had changed her color, it was true, but she was a well-known sponger, and I noticed one that I recognized.

There was one foolish fellow that reminded me of my shabby deckhand, whom I had always thought out of his mind, standing there on his head on the rocks, had waving his legs to attract attention.

"Why! There's Silly Theodore," called out the captain.

"I'm going ashore," I said.

"I'm going with you too," said the captain. "But look after your guns. There's going to be something doing—quiet as it looks."

So we rowed ashore, and there was Theodore capering in front of a pile of sponges, but no other face that I knew. But there were seven or eight negroes whose looks I took no great liking to.

"Like some fancy sponges to send home?" said one of these, coming up to me. "Cost you five times as much in Nassau."

"Certainly I'd like a few sponges," I said.

And then Theodore came up to me, looking as though he had lost his mind.

"Give Me Dat!" He said.

over, the rather fancy silk tie I happened to be wearing.

"Give me dat!" he said, touching it like a crazy man.

"I can't afford to give you that, Theodore."

"I'd die for dat," he declared.

"Take this handkerchief instead," but, meanwhile, my eyes were opening. "Take this instead, Theodore," I suggested.

"I'd die for dat," he repeated, touching the tie.

His voice and touch made me sick and afraid, just as people in a lunatic asylum make one afraid.

"Look out!" murmured Tom at my elbow.

And just then I noticed hiding in some bushes of seven-year apple trees, two faces I had good reason to know.

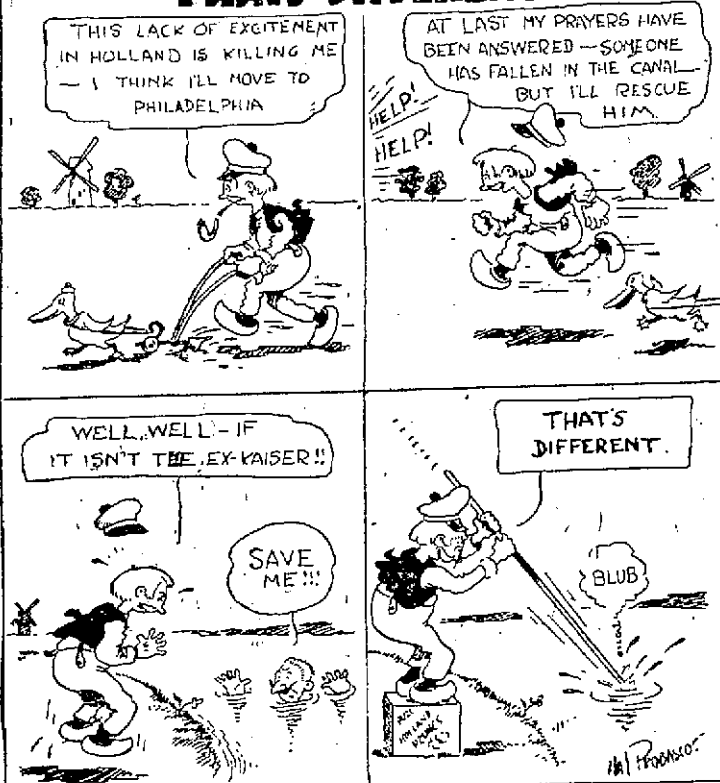

I had barely time to pull out the commandant's revolver from my pocket. I knew it was to be either the pockmarked genius or the engineer. But for the moment I was not to be sure which one I had hit. For, as my gun went off, something heavy came down on my head, and for the time I was shut off from whatever else was going on.

"Which did I hit, Tom?" were my first words as I came back to the glory of the world; but I didn't say them for a long time, and from what Tom told me, it was a wonder I ever said them at all.

"There he is, sir," said Tom, pointing to a long, dark figure stretched out near by. "I'm afraid he's not the man you were looking for."

"Poor fellow!" I said; it was George, the engineer; "I'm sorry—I saw the muzzles of their guns sticking out of the bush there. It was they, or

"Kissless Bride" Having No Trouble Getting Marriage to Youth Annulled

New York, June 14.—Mrs. Virginia Reeves Warner, known as the "kissless bride," is having no particular trouble annulling her secret marriage to the youth who told her that "he pitied married people who had children," and that he didn't care for her any more.

The papers in the proceeding, made public through the filing of the referee's report recommending that a decree be granted, revealed the fact that the Warner marriage was kept secret from the many friends of the young people, and that after their marriage, June 15, 1917, in St. Andrew's R. C. church, they met again at the home of mutual friends and relatives in Philadelphia, New York and Washington, without betraying to any of them that they were legally man and wife. They never lived together after their marriage.

"I never even took walks with him," testified Mrs. Warner, who at the time of her marriage was 21 years old, her husband being a year younger. "Later, in Washington, I saw him at the Potomac hotel, where my parents were stopping, but we saw each other only in the lobby. We met again at the Chevy Chase club, near Washington, and we breakfasted there. Father and mother knew nothing about our marriage."

"One day I told Mr. Warner about some friends of mine, Anna Gray and Lieutenant Gray. Lieutenant Gray's wife was going to become a mother. 'I'm sorry for them,' he said; 'I pity people who have children.' 'Did he pity anyone who had children?' the young woman was asked. 'He did,' was the answer.

"He said that the reason you did not live together?" "He said that we simply could not—that he did not have money enough to support me," was the answer. "He was out of employment just before we were wed. Then he got $20 a week at Hog Island, and later was raised to $36. I tried to show how we could get along—made out a family budget showing that we could live well enough on $160 a month."

"Yes," he said, "I suppose that people could live together on $150 a month, but for personal reasons and for lack of interest in you I could never live with you." I told him that my position was intolerable—that I insisted upon knowing what I was to be. He repeated that he did not care for me and I realized that there was no love on his part. I told my parents about it. Mr. Warner declared that if her husband had ever asked her to live in the same house she would have lived with him in spite of the money question. "I was willing at all times to be the mother of his children," she insisted. Warner and his wife, according to further testimony, met often at the Washington home of her parents, at 1870 Wyoming avenue, but did not betray that they were married. They did not even indicate that there was any warmth of affection existing between them, and neither relatives nor friends ever saw them kiss.

Springer, Milwaukee, was elected president of the Women's Catholic Union of Wisconsin here at the final session, at which the delegates adopted a resolution authorizing the establishment of a home for working girls in Milwaukee. The sum of $1,200 was collected as a nucleus for a fund which will be used for the erection of the institution.

Boy Scout News

Edited by Walter W. Felts.

The other day, I had a talk with Mr. Preston, boys' secretary at the Y. M. C. A., and learned his views as to the Janesville Scouts. Mr. Preston was in favor of organizing a cabinet composed of scouts and letting this cabinet work out plans for different activities all season. He named over a few things which he thought could be carried out successfully. A bicycle trip was probably the most interesting of all these. This trip could be so planned to last about six days, the party starting Monday morning and returning the following Saturday night. The party would, of course, eat and sleep in the open. Such a trip would be new and hold out many opportunities for the scout to learn new things. Another thing which Mr. Preston mentioned was a track meet or something on the same order. Mr. Preston could probably think of many interesting things to arrange if he were asked to.

Has your troop elected a troop reporter yet? If not, it would be a good idea to bring up the subject at the next meeting and elect one. Between June 15 and July 15, hand in troop reports to Arleigh Pierson, assistant physical director at the Y. M. C. A. Don't forget.

Three cheers for the Rotary club! We hear that they are going to work for an executive here in Janesville. We hope they will succeed, and we'll do our part.

Do you scouts believe a strawberry can play a joke? Sure thing! There is a certain kind which is white when ripe and would be taken for a green one. But someone found that they were good and so, if you happen to run across some white strawberries, you might sample one and see if they belong to this family of "white-when-ripe" strawberries.

Scouts! Do a good turn! Hunt up some good news and hand it in. The news does not have to be troop news, although troop news is wanted badly, but all kinds of scout news.

TROOP NEWS.

Troop No. 4. The meeting of Troop 4, Wednesday, was called at 7:15. The roll was then called. Two new members were present at the meeting. This year's camp was the main topic of discussion. Mr. Preston is advisor of Troop 4.

Troop 2. Not many scouts were at the meeting Wednesday, probably due to "Gazette boys' night" at the carnival. Troop 2 may build a cabin in the country if a good place can be secured. Camp was talked over and a few suggestions were made concerning the camp. Mr. Pierson read a good story to those present and then the meeting adjourned.

Delicious!

A Detroit Vapor Oil Stove in your household, makes possible the cooking and baking of any and all dishes; delicious roasted meats, done to a turn, light biscuits that make your mouth water, in fact the result of cooking and baking on a Detroit Vapor Oil Stove results in that old time saying "Just like Mother used to make."

You can have a hot fire—almost as fast as gas—when you must prepare a meal in a hurry, and a quick oven when required for the most delicate of pastries.

One of the reasons so many people buy Detroit Vapor Oil Stoves is that they are really wickless. The word "wickless" is a much abused word, but when describing a Detroit Vapor Oil Stove, it is used correctly, as a "Detroit Vapor" stove has no wick of any kind. The burners light on a scientific principle—instantly—like gas. This principle makes wicks entirely unnecessary. There is nothing to learn—simply strike a match, light the burners and put the kettles on at once and the cooking has begun—that is all there is to it. It is just the oil stove you have always wished for.

The burners save one-quarter of the fuel. One burner will burn at full capacity from 18 to 20 hours on one gallon of fuel. The success of "Detroit Vapor Oil Stoves" can be attributed to the service and durability of our giant burner, the heat condenser and the efficient valve and tank arrangement.

Skilled employees work under ideal conditions, plenty of daylight, fresh air and perfect sanitary conditions—these things make for a greater labor efficiency and mean better work—a better product.

Hears From Germany. Marine, June 14.—Al. Hanebeck of Paper Mill No. 2 here, received his first letter from Germany in over two years this week. It came from relatives who reside near Cologne where they operate a paper mill. Two years ago a letter from there telling of the death of Mr. Hanebeck's mother was permitted to go through, but this is the first mail to come through since that time. The letter from Germany stated that the conditions there were good and that they could now write to the United States direct, which would indicate that the mail to Germany is open again. Mr. Hanebeck lost one brother in the war and another brother is now a prisoner in France.

May Oust Commission. Green Bay, June 14.—An attempt may be made to oust the commission form of government and return to the aldermanic rule in Green Bay. Petitions are to be put in circulation within a few days. It is said, to call upon the council to call a special election, at which the question of change in the form of municipal rule may be balloted upon. The petitions will have to contain 1,300 names to be recognized by the council. Green Bay adopted the commission form of government in 1915, and its friends believe it has given better service than the old system.

ALL-AMERICAN

GIANT IN STRENGTH

LOOK at the picture of the All-American Super-Truck above. It is a giant in appearance. And it is just as gigantic in strength, endurance and ability to resist the wear and tear of tough hauling work.

That resistance is in-built. And it goes further than physical facts. It goes down into the profit account, for this endurance and wear-and-tear resistance means insignificant upkeep cost; it means that steady day-in and day-out service—without time off for repair shop visits—is created in the designing of the truck.

Its clean chassis construction, simplicity in itself, is responsible for its strength—and incidentally for the price at which it is offered. It is built on United States war experience with trucks, the most grilling work ever given any motor vehicle.

The government's Mexican border truck experience shattered accepted truck ideas so fast it became an engineering revelation. And out of that mass of hard truths came the All-American Super Truck chassis.

The result is that it is different, simpler, stronger and endowed with more road-resistance than any contemporary motor vehicle. It has 35% more horse-power; its backbone, the frame, is stronger, bigger and has a safety factor of 5 to 1; it doesn't waste power delivering it at the hubs of the wheels, it delivers it close to the rims.

That accounts for absence of power loss which is great in some contemporary makes. It uses the famous Hotchkiss drive; it has a separate weight-carrying rear axle.

It is built in the All-American factory under the same load you will put on it; it is tested under a heavier load than you will have.

You can't afford to choose any truck until you have become acquainted with the All-American Super-Truck. Why not inspect it today?

Forestalling Battery-Ignition Troubles

Attend To The Sparking Devices And Avoid Involuntary Stops

DIFFERENT BATTERY IGNITION SYSTEMS vary so greatly in detail that the suggestions here given can be of a general character only and the instruction book relating to the particular system in question should always be followed. Don't fail to lubricate the bearings and gears of the timer shaft, by means of the grease cup usually provided. See that the make-and-break mechanism works perfectly freely and that no dirt or oil is present to make it act sluggishly. If the contact points do not come together over their full surface, it is usually advisable to fit them so they do so, by placing a thin jeweler's file between them, pressing them together, and withdrawing the file, repeating this operation until a full contact is secured. A piece of very fine sandpaper can be used in the same manner as the file (reversing it so as to act upon each point), if only a little treatment is needed or if the metal is very hard. If the points are too inaccessible to be treated in this way, they can usually be removed and trued up separately on a small oil stone. The points of some breaker mechanisms are not intended to be "doctored," but to run as long as they will and then be replaced, and it is well to have the replacement parts on hand and to know how to put them in readily. Any spring parts of the timer, that are likely to break should be kept in duplicate. The contact points of all timers should be kept adjusted for the recommended distance of separation, a thickness gauge being furnished with each outfit. The correct gap is usually 1-32 inch or less and much variation from this will change the timing or cause missing. Be sure there is no dust in the distributor housing, as the high tension current may strike upon it. Never use oil on the distributor, but a very little vasoline rubbed over the path of the rotating contact and the mostly wiped off, is sometimes recommended. The automatic advance mechanism, if present, requires lubrication. If the equipment includes an ignition switch, designed to open automatically and thus protect the battery from accident discharge, its efficacy should be demonstrated once in a great while. Try, for firmness, all connections of every wire and cable including those at the timer distributor, the ignition switch, the coil, the grounding point and at the connection board, where the ignition circuit obtains its current. If there are un-armored primary wires, see that they are properly fastened in place and not oil soaked or being broken by repeated bending. Keep dust and oil wiped from the spark-plug wires and the distributor casing.

CLAIMS HIS FORD IS WORN OUT

E. G. writes: Please tell me what to do with a worn out Ford. Answer: We think perhaps you may be joking, as there is a general opinion that Fords never wear out, but continue to "ramble right along" indefinitely. However, we are going to take your inquiry seriously. We suggest that you obtain an estimate from a Ford agency as to how much it will cost to put this car in good order and, if this amount is very considerably less than the value of the used cars of this model, we should advise you to have the work done and sell or keep the car. On the other hand, if repairs will cost nearly as much as the car will sell for, we advise you to dispose of it to some "auto wrecker" for what you can get. Some people retain the body for the children to play in or place it in the yard and grow flowers in it, not wishing to give up entirely an old and faithful friend.

IS THIS A COMPRESSION KNOCK?

F. W. writes: I have a four-cylinder 1913 Ford which knocks badly on hills, but when I pull up. Questions of general interest to motorists will be answered in this column, space permitting. Address Albert L. Clough, care of this office.

Hoosier Cops Fire on "Thief"—It Was a Rat

[BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS.] Indianapolis, Ind., June 14.—A pedestrian passing the Gayety Theatre heard a noise in the basement and called the police. Two "fly" cops were sent to the theatre "lost sweet." Steadily entering the dark cellar of the playhouse the two policemen listened. Then came a rasping noise like that made by a file. Both patrolmen fired. There was a shriek, then silence. Throwing their flashlights on their quarry they found the burglar was a rat.

Lizzie Gets Religious; Answers to Lord Only

[BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS.] San Francisco, June 14.—Lizzie Griffiths, of chocolate countenance and buxom build, told United States District Judge F. H. Rudkin that she no longer considered herself accountable to any earthly tribunal. She was arrested for violation of the Federal vice regulations. "Since I was arrested I done got religion in my soul, Judge, and now I ain't accountable to nobody but de Lord," she said. "I think," responded the court, "that you had better consider yourself accountable to the United States government to the extent of a $5 fine. If not, you go to jail." Lizzie paid.

All American Truck Company Buys Thirty-four Acre Tract

A big industrial deal in the northwest part of the city, involving the erection of a $1,500,000 plant, featured yesterday's real estate news. It was the purchase by the All American Truck company from John J. Lovett, president of the Pioneer State Savings bank, of a tract of thirty-four acres at the southwest corner of Grand avenue and Natches street for a reported consideration of about $100,000. The company will immediately begin the construction of the first unit of a plant the ultimate cost of which will be $1,500,000. The cost of the first unit is estimated at about $200,000. Plans for the building are now being prepared by Architect Samuel N. Croghan. In connection with the construction of the plant the Fort Dearborn Trust and Savings bank has underwritten a bond issue for $150,000, to run seven years. The land acquired fronts north 666 feet on Grand avenue, with an average depth of 2,200 feet, back to the main line of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul right of way, and adjoins on the east the Dunning branch of the road. The sale of the land was negotiated by J. N. Litsey and J. E. Briggs. Chicago Tribune, June 13rd.

THE CREEPER

As the first pale ray of dawn stole into his narrow bedroom, Chesterfield Jones' eyes opened. He blinked dazedly, trying to remember. Then, in a flash, all came back to him. He listened intently, then, noiselessly, he threw back the bedclothes. Cautiously, he put one leg out of bed, followed it by slow degrees until he was completely out. Not a sound. He drew a long breath and crept along the cold, creaking hall, down the cold, creaking stairs, into the cold but not

No Punctures No Blowouts Don't Use AIR in Your Tires!

Air in automobile tires is a "back number" now that a perfect tire filler has been discovered. Air was used just as a "makeshift" until something better—safer—less expensive—could be found. The great trouble with air has always been the impossibility of keeping it CONFINED in the casings—it placed the motorist at the mercy of punctures and blowouts—you never knew what minute a nail, or tack or piece of glass might cause you delay, danger and expense. ESSENKAY, the Better-than-Air Tire Filler, has taken the UNCERTAINTY out of motoring. It rides like air, yet is free from every defect of air—Essenkay is a wonderful discovery that you cannot afford to do without.

Double Tire Mileage--Prevents Punctures and Blowouts--Saves Cost of Extra Tires and Rims, Inner Tubes, Pumps and Jacks

More than 75,000 car owners now use ESSENKAY in place of air in tires. Many of these live in country districts, where ESSENKAY was for several years tested over roughest roads—over hills—through mud, sand, water—under heavy overloads—before it was offered for use on smooth city streets.

Essenkay Saves Half Motoring Cost

ESSENKAY MORE than doubles tire mileage. Thus it cuts tire bills to LESS THAN HALF, and by doing away with all expense for inner tubes, spare tires and rims, air pumps, jacks, etc., ESSENKAY really saves considerable more than half motoring cost, to say nothing of the freedom from danger and delay.

Essenkay's First Cost is the Last Cost

ESSENKAY is an INVESTMENT, not an EXPENSE. When ESSENKAY filled tires are worn down to the last layer of fabric, the old tire may be discarded and the same ESSENKAY transferred to the new casing. You do not buy ESSENKAY to last the life of your tire, but to last the life of your car.

ESSENKAY is a flexible, light and highly resilient material—NOT A LIQUID—therefore cannot leak out of tires. It looks like rubber, has all the desirable flexible quality of finest Para Rubber—yet it actually contains NO RUBBER IN ANY FORM, and so has none of the imperfections and weaknesses of rubber. It is not affected by heat, cold, atmospheric or climatic conditions.

FREE TRIAL OFFER

It won't cost you a penny to test ESSENKAY in your tires. Just come in and have it installed in your car. Then give it a good trial under your own loading conditions over the worst roads you can find. If you are not perfectly satisfied, the trial will be absolutely free to you. COME IN AND INVESTIGATE ESSENKAY TODAY.
